time out for other things, too

JOSEPH CROSS

Joseph Cross is appearing in his third movie. It's called "Northern Lights" and was made especially for Disney Channel. "I play a kid," Joseph says, "who has to live with his Aunt (played by Diane Keaton) after his Dad dies."

EARS: How did you get into acting?

JOSEPH: I saw "Rookie of the Year." I tried really hard to be great at baseball. After a couple of years I knew I wasn't going to be a great baseball player. So I tried acting.

EARS: Who is your favorite actor?

JOSEPH: Leonardo DiCaprio—he's awesome. I loved "Romeo and Juliet."

EARS: What's it like acting with big stars?

You're also in movies with Michael Keaton and Rosie O'Donnell.
JOSEPH: They're really nice people. Diane Keaton was great.

THE MAN'S A REAL ANIMAL

"GOING WILD WITH JEFF CORWIN"

Disney

What's a typical day in the office like for Jeff Corwin, the star of Disney Channel's new series Going Wild with Jeff Corwin? Just the same-ol' same-ol': wrestling a crocodile, petting a tarantula, eating a termite or two. Let's face it, Jeff Corwin loves life on the wild side. We just had to talk to this man.

EARS: How old were you when you decided you wanted to be a wild adventurer?

JEFF: I was 16. I went to Belize. Once I was in the jungle, I knew that this was something I was going to be doing for the rest of my life.

EARS: In one episode, you return to Belize to search for the tapir. During the trip, you picked up a poisonous snake. Weren't you worried about what would happen when you did that?

JEFF: I've done a lot of work with venomous snakes. The study of reptiles and amphibians is called herpetology; that's my background. I wanted the audience to see that snake up close and personal. I would never touch a poisonous snake unless I had to, because not only could I get hurt, but I could injure the snake as well. And I would NEVER want somebody watching this show to try picking up a poisonous snake.

EARS: And the most dangerous animal you've met?

JEFF: A water buffalo. I was walking along the Nile, looking for cobras. I spooked the water buffalo and it charged me.

EARS: Does any animal gross you out?

JEFF: No. All life forms are significant...everything has a purpose—if it doesn't have a purpose and it doesn't fit in, it's extinct.

EARS: Jeff, we really have to know: What do termites taste like?

JEFF: They don't taste terribly delicious. I ate termites to show people that what they think is a gross thing to eat is actually an important resource for other people in different parts of the world. Termites are high in protein.

EARS: Do you have a favorite wild animal?

JEFF: The most wonderful encounter I ever had was canoeing up the Amazon. I met a freshwater dolphin.

GOING WILD WITH JEFF CORWIN

WHAT IT IS & WHEN IT'S ON!

What: Each week on Going Wild, Jeff takes you to a different part of the world to meet an animal that's very special to its region.

But look out—traveling with Jeff you're sure to meet lots of other animals on the trail.

When: Sunday evening at 7pm/6c, with a special 2-episode premiere on August 10th

Jeff Corwin

WHAT HE'S SAYING

"I think our ultimate goal is to make our audience feel like they're on this intimate and personal voyage into the unknown. Beyond that I would love for every kid to watch this show and think they could do what I'm doing. Anyone could do what I'm doing. You just have to want to do it badly enough."
